Grundy Is Beaten For Senate Seat In Pennsylvania

High Tariff Veteran Loses Badly to James J.
Davis

VARE MACHINE WINS

Brown Wins Over Pin-chot in Governor's Campaign

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—(AP)—The lead of Secretary of Labor Davis for the Republican nomination for United States senator grew, while that of Francis Shunk Brown, his running mate for governor, was cut today by additional returns from interior counties in yesterday's primary.

Tabulations of 6,449 districts out of 8,701 in the state showed Davis led for United States senator over Joseph R. Grundy by a margin of 27,560.

Brown's lead of 180,000, received in the city of Philadelphia, had shrunk to 55,121.

All of the Brown-Davis stronghold in Philadelphia, and two-thirds of Allegheny county (Pittsburgh) were included in the total of 6,449 districts, which gave for the senate, Grundy 337,395; Davis 581,355; and Bohlen, the wet candidate, 195,164.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 21.—(AP)—Joseph Grundy, head of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' association, and famous maker of high tariffs, was decisively defeated yesterday in his first attempt at elective office—the United States Senate—in the Republican state primary election.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis badly defeated Mr. Grundy, who was seeking re-election to the senate seat to which he was appointed by Governor Fisher, and which he had to defend in the popular vote yesterday.

In the Governor's campaign, Gifford Pinchot, former governor and bitter enemy of the public utilities, also went down to defeat, losing to Francis S. Brown.

The Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Republican machines were victorious all the way down the line, routing the progressive Republicans who supported Pinchot for governor, and the manufacturing wing of the party which for several decades has favored Grundy in his high tariff programs.

The election was a demonstration of the political strength of William S. Vare, who from his Philadelphia stronghold directed the attack against the up-state progressive and independent vote. Grundy's doom was regarded by political observers as sealed several months ago when he refused to make peace with the Vare faction in Philadelphia, and also lost the close co-operation of the Pittsburgh machine, which later went over to the Vare ticket—Davis and Brown.

The victorious Pennsylvania candidates in a region where the Republican nomination is equivalent to election—come from a distinguished line of statesmen. James J. Davis had been Secretary of Labor under three presidents, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover; and Francis S. Brown is former Pennsylvania attorney general, and the descendant of two Pennsylvania governors.

Aged Woman Dies Here Last Night

Has Been Confined to Bed
For A Month After Injury

Mrs. Mary Jane Jones, aged 70 years, died at the home of her son in law, W. B. Boyett, in this city at 2:50 o'clock last night.

April 24th, Mrs. Jones fell at her home east of this city, breaking her hip. She was brought to the home of Mr. Boyett so as to be nearer medical aid. Sunday morning her condition became worse and relatives were summoned to her bedside.

The deceased was married to James Henry Jones, November 11, 1877 and to this union ten children were born, seven of whom are still living. They are: Floyd Jones, Hope; Edward Jones, Emmet; Mrs. Lennie Fuller, Stamps; Owen Jones, Hope; Robert Jones, Hope; Bonnie Jones, Hope; and Mrs. Mary Boyett, of Hope, there are also a number of grand children and other relatives.

Funeral services were conducted this afternoon at the Ayers cemetery, six miles east of this city by Rev. Will Fincher of Stamps.

HIGHWAYS

All state highways out of Hope with the exception of the road to Texarkana will be passable by 5 o'clock this afternoon, the local district highway office announced at noon today.

East of Hope, between Prescott and Gurdon, the only danger point has been the bridge across the Little Missouri river. Traffic has been moving through today with the aid of teams, but may move under its own power by 5 this afternoon, as the river is falling.

From Prescott to Camden, everything is clear, and the road is in good condition from Hope south to Lewisville. From Lewisville to Texarkana the going is heavy, and the route is not recommended for a day or so.

Traffic conditions are bad also on the Hope-Index-Texarkana route, north of here, in common with other roads intersecting the Red river.

A serious break confronts the highway department in the bridge washout between Hope and Fulton, where there is a cut of 90 feet. A carload of piling was unloaded this morning, and bridge timbers are on their way here from the Bodcaw Lumber company at Stamps. Pile-drivers were summoned as soon as the break was reported, and construction will get under way at once.

A less serious washout, between Hope and Washington on highway No. 4, will be repaired with a new bridge by Thursday, the department announced. Timbers have been placed on the location, and a new bridge is under way.

Atkins Speaks on Life's Vocations

Determination Most Valuable Factor, Speaker
Tells Students

"Students of Hope High school expect to win for themselves a measure of success in future life," said Will S. Atkins in this week's program of vocational guidance presented during chapel hour at the school each Wednesday morning. "What measure of success they may attain depends more upon their determination than any other one factor," he said. However, he pointed out the present day need for specialized training in whatever field of endeavor they may choose for themselves. "Next to determination, education and a fitness for your future life are necessary in winning the place you hope to attain. Some of you will be graduated from the high school this week. Few if any may yet have decided to what profitable use you can place your talents. More complete education and special training in your chosen field will be needed before you can take your rightful place in the world."

"Your parents have made sacrifices," he said "to give you the education you are acquiring in the schools of Hope. Many of them are giving you additional schooling after you finish here. But the only method of cashing in on these sacrifices, of realizing upon the times and effort of your instructors in imparting knowledge to you, and in helping you to adapt yourselves to the world, is to have that necessary determination to make the most of your talents, and to acquire all the education and specialized training you possibly can in order that you may make the best use of those factors."

"You have plenty of time," he said, "to find the field of endeavor to which you are best suited. But you are right now forming habits of action or procrastination which will directly affect the amount of determination you put into your future career."

5,207 Names Are On Pension Roll

Hempstead County Has 114 Confederates Receiving Pensions

LITTLE ROCK, May 21.—Compilations prepared by State Auditor J. Oscar Humphrey show that of the total list of 5,207 Confederate pensioners on the official rolls of Arkansas, 4,017 are widows and only 1,190 veterans of the Civil war. The report was made by the state auditor preparatory to mailing annual affidavits blank to the various county clerks for distribution to pensioners. The affidavits are to be filled out and sworn to by the pensioners and filed with the clerks by July 7. The affidavit requires that the pensioner show that they are a veteran or widow of a veteran, do not own more than $500 worth of property or have an independent income of more than $250 a year.

Meetings of county pension board will be held not later than July 14 to approve or reject affidavits filed by pensioners. Certified lists of qualified pensioners will then be mailed to the auditor of state.

According to the records of the state pension board, Crittenden and Newton counties have no Confederate veterans as pensioners, and there are fewer than 10 veterans in each of 6 other counties.

Hempstead county has a total of 114 veterans who are drawing pensions.

Bishop Canon Is Excused For His Deals In Stock

Methodists Hear His Confession and Forgive Him

NEW APPOINTMENTS

Dallas: Conference of Church Nearing Its Conclusion

DALLAS, May 21.—(AP)—Dr. A. Frank Smith, of Houston, Texas, was elected the third new bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the general conference here today. His election was made on nine ballots. Official vote was announced as 240 for Dr. Smith, and 129 for Dr. T. D. Ellis, of Louisville, Ky.

Dr. Smith is even younger than the two bishops named yesterday, having just passed his 40th birthday. He is a native of Texas.

He was pastor of Law-Highlights Methodist church at San Antonio for several years, and for a number of years has been pastor of the First Methodist church at Houston.

Dr. A. Frank Smith of Houston, new Methodist bishop, is well known in Hope, having married a local girl, the former Miss Bessie Crutchfield. Mrs. Smith is a daughter of C. I. Crutchfield, and sister of Randolph Crutchfield.

The climax of a two weeks' religious controversy was reached yesterday when Bishop James Cannon Jr., of Washington, D. C., begged and received the forgiveness of his church for speculating in stocks with a New York firm, since taken over by federal authorities.

Delegates to the Quadrennial Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, watched the bishop tensely as he listened to the report of the Episcopacy Committee exonerating him. He sat with bowed head.

Confesses Mistake
Then, leaning heavily on his crutch, Cannon came to the front of the platform and told the delegates what he had told the committee—that he had made a mistake and that he was sorry.

His eyes filled with tears as he spoke and when he had finished and returned to his chair, for a long time his face was hidden from the audience.

Almost an anti-climax was the statement of G. T. Fitzgough of Memphis, that he had additional charges to lodge, made available by the unsealing of the records of Kable & Co., the bishop's brokers.

Fitzgough, leader of the score of laymen who brought the charges, leaped to his feet after the reading of the committee's report by the secretary. Insistently he sought recognition from the chair and when it was gained, declared the committee had acted illegally. He promised a formal protest, including the new charges.

The gist of the committee's report was that it had once decided to bring Cannon to a church trial; that Cannon then had expressed his contrition in a letter; that the committee had reconsidered its action, and decided that the interests of the church, and the church's attitude toward speculation already had been demonstrated; and that a trial would not help matters further.

Lindy's Epochal Flight Three Years Old Today

NEW YORK, May 20.—Three years ago today a young air mail pilot, Charles A. Lindbergh, climbed into the "blind" pilot's seat of a Ryan monoplane and whirled away from the rain soaked meadow beside the Roosevelt field runway.

Thirty-three and a half hours later Lindbergh set down his plane on Le Bourget field, after a 3610-mile flight, and became internationally famous.

He has been flying ever since, and so have thousands of others, converted to aviation by his example. Air transportation was here before Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, but public confidence was born in that flight, and has been growing steadily ever since.

A week from today will mark Lindbergh's first wedding anniversary, for it was on May 27, 1928, that he was wed to Anne Spencer Morrow, daughter of Ambassador to Mexico Dwight Morrow. Since his wedding Lindbergh has had his wife as a passenger on almost all of his flights, and has taught her to fly and navigate an airplane.

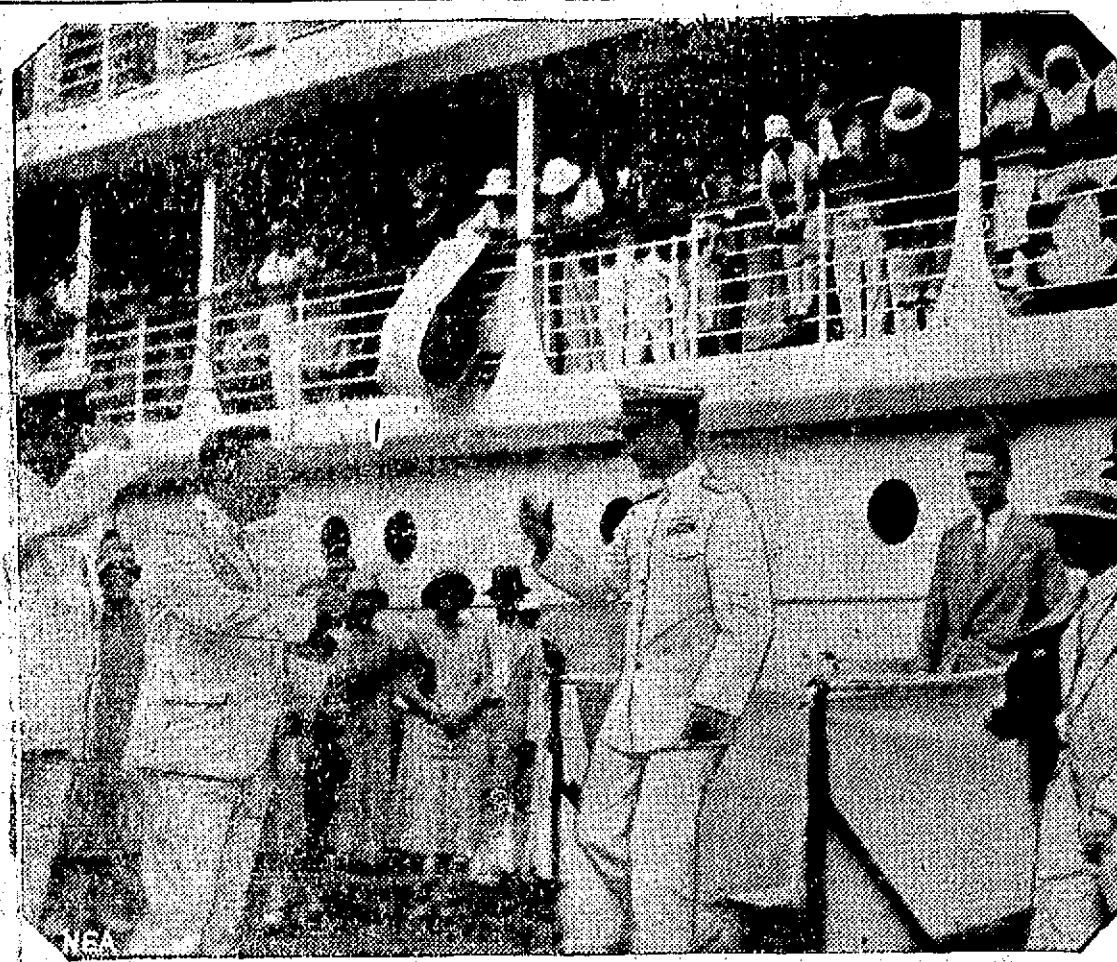

One more record has been added to the Lindbergh string of aerial vic-stories during the past year—that being the flight on last Easter Sunday from Los Angeles to New York in the record time of 14 hours, 45 minutes and 32 seconds with 20 minutes used in refueling at Wichita, Kansas.

The past year also has seen Lindbergh's conversion to flights in gliders. He spent his 28th birthday February 4th in the midst of a series of tests with a glider in the high altitudes of California His birthday, however, was spent in inspecting his new monoplane in which he later established the transcontinental record. The flight was not an attempt at a record, Lindbergh pointed out, but an experiment in high altitude flying. The entire trip was made at around 10,000 feet.

After breaking the record which had been held by Capt. Frank Hawks, Lindbergh opened a 7000-mile airline to Panama, and thence to Buenos Aires. He flew from New York to Miami, thence to Havana, across the Caribbean sea to the coast of Honduras and to Cristobal, Canal Zone. Other planes completed the journey and Lindbergh returned to attend the New York Aviation show.

Byrd is pictured here as he stepped down the gangplank of the steamer Rangitiki in Balboa, Panama Canal Zone, at the end of the long voyage from New Zealand. The famous explorer is shown being greeted by Capt. C. H. Woodward, left, representing Governor Burgess.

Hightower Says No Warning Given

Motorist Declares He Saw No Watchman at the Wrecked Bridge

Denying that he saw any watchman, J. P. Hightower, of Sherman, Tex., who was wrecked at the bridge washout between Hope and Fulton about 1 o'clock Monday morning, told The Star today that he drove off into the creek without any warning.

The report from the local district highway office yesterday stated that Mr. Hightower apparently ran past a negro watchman supposed to have been posted at the washout, and also crashed through the barricade erected to halt traffic.

Mr. Hightower told The Star today that the only barricade he saw was a pile of brush on one side of the road. He said he was driving at a rate of about 30 miles an hour, and suddenly plunged through the wrecked bridge.

He is the Arkansas representative for a Kansas City publishing house, maintaining headquarters at Little Rock. He had been visiting relatives who publish the Sherman Democrat at Sherman, Tex., but having several appointments in Hope Monday, set out from Texas for this city Sunday.

Conditions Are Improved In Red River Flood Area

Smackover Creek, Which Flooded Five Towns, Is Receding

RED CROSS IS ACTIVE

Ouachita Is Rising Steadily
In Southwest
Arkansas

EL DORADO, May 21.—(AP)—The Ouachita river, which during the past 24 hours has flooded Calton, north of here and forced 500 persons to leave their homes today was spreading over an adjoining territory and highway, making an additional 150 square miles to be flooded in the South Arkansas oil fields and highways which are already under water.

West of here Smackover creek, which flooded five towns in the thickly populated oil fields, forcing 1,000 into idleness and rendering 2,000 homeless, is receding. The Ouachita meets Smackover creek about one mile above Calton, which kept about nine inches of water in town during the night, and was rising steadily today.

A sandbag levee, built by hundreds of workmen around five million feet of lumber of the Nickey Bros. Lumber company, broke during the night and damaged the lumber pile extensively. No estimate of the damage could be made immediately.

All during the night refugees arrived in boats loaded with furniture which they were able to save from their homes. They numbered about 500 persons, 250 whom were housed in 500 box cars along the Rock Island right-of-way which passes through the center part of town and stands present about seven feet above the water which submerged Calton's miles around.

Food is being furnished refugees by citizen committees of El Dorado and Calton. Last night food was rushed to them in fire trucks from El Dorado. The Red Cross organization is expected to move into Calton today and provide the needy with food, clothing and medical relief.

TEXARKANA, May 21.—(AP)—Conditions improved in the Red river flood section of southwest Arkansas today as the swollen river neared a stand still at Index and rose only a few inches during the night at Fulton. All refugees are being cared for by Red Cross and other relief organizations, while river crews removed all person at point of danger.

Highways in this section of Arkansas and Texas are still impassable in places as a result of high water and bridge washouts.

Officer Kills Self As Treaty Protested

TOKYO, May 21.—(AP)—In the tense atmosphere surrounding the return of Admiral Kotaka Takarabe, minister of marine, from the London conference and his first conferences with the cabinet and senior naval officers, a sensation was created Tuesday by the suicide of a high naval officer, which the press is exploiting as an echo of the navy's bitter opposition to the London pact.

Lieutenant-Commander Eiji Kusaki attached to the naval general staff, slashed his abdomen with a sword aboard a train between Kobe and Tokyo. He died at a hospital at Numazu, where he was removed from the train. Although Kusaki's comrades declined to comment on his act, it was said he recently expressed bitterness and despondency over the future of the navy as the result of the London treaty.

Programs and Promises

THIS paper does not take much stock in politics, writes Stanley Andrews in the Arkansas Farmer. But occasionally some fellow gets an idea that we are for this fellow or that fellow in public office or wanting to get in. Not long ago we paid our respects in rather plain language to some things that have taken place at the state capitol. Immediately some fellow came along accusing us of trying to embarrass the administration. A little later we happened to make some comments that seemed to coincide with the ideas of a group in this state and its program. We were accused of being the mouthpiece of that group. We have been running a series of articles on the Martineau Highway law. Some of the politicians are accusing us of being the mouthpiece of the Highway Commission, and so on. It's hard to please everybody. To be quite frank about it, we don't try.

Now the average politician will promise about anything that will get votes. His object is to get in office and as quickly as possible forget his promises. A state that depends on political promises for progress won't get very far. This paper is more interested in principles than in men. We are more interested in programs that promise.

Among other things, we believe in the Martineau Road Program. Its faithful carrying out is vital to this state. We think our rural school program as exemplified in the operations of the equalization fund and the consolidation program are vital to the future of Arkansas. In fact, we believe our roads and our schools are more vital to our future progress than any governor we could elect.

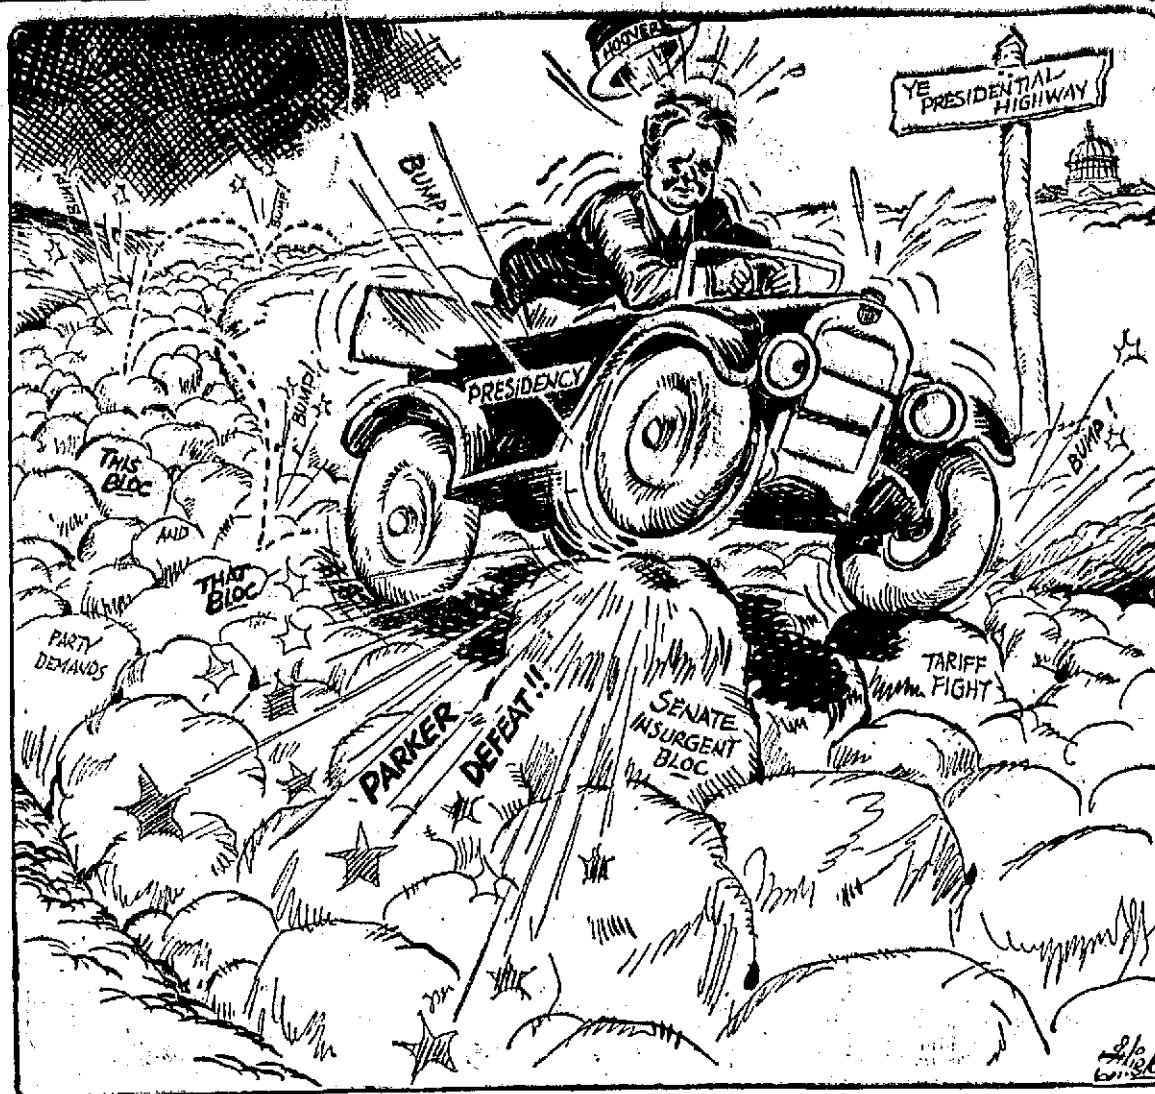

We have too many secondary agricultural schools in this state and some of them should be abolished.

The state elects men to office and pays them a salary for being there but we pay large fees to outsiders to handle the real business of the government. That should be stopped. We are for the state income tax law as the last resort in a revenue producing measure but we'd rather see a million dollars saved in the operation of state government than see it raised by additional taxation. About half the administrative machinery of Arkansas state government is out of date. It should be modernized. When it is modernized we will abolish a lot of the petty graft in this state simply by removing the opportunity for it. Our back tax laws are a burden on legitimate business. They give some lawyers a fat living off concerns that are trying to do the right thing in the development of Arkansas. That should be stopped. We believe that equalization among our schools and equalization of opportunity for the country boy and girl with the city boy and girl means just what it says. We believe parity in the Martineau highway law means just what it says. As long as we have a voice we are going to insist that these laws be carried out in the spirit of their meaning. We are not Pollyanna enough to believe that state government or any other government will ever entirely pure and free from graft and favoritism. We think as a people we should voice the things we want rather than for some office-seeker to tell us what we should want. To that end we discuss quite frankly matters of moment to the people of our state. It is entirely our privilege to agree or disagree with us. On the whole we all think too little for ourselves and depend too much upon what some fellow with probably a selfish interest to serve, has to say. Arkansas people have got to determine what they want and then go after it, rather than depend upon the promise of the average office-seeker. Politics is a business and a manner of living. Office holders are going to try to keep the business good for themselves.

Better Crops

EIGHTY-TWO farmers of Bowie and Miller counties have entered the cotton and corn growing contests, for which the State National Bank has offered $500 in prize money. With first, second and third prizes for cotton and first and second prizes for corn in each county. Small tracts necessarily will be involved in the contest, total farm quantity not being the major consideration. What is desired is more production per acre and better quality. If a farmer can grow more and better cotton or corn on a small plot he can do like wise on larger plots, up to the limit of his capacity to take care of the crop. Chief value of the contests is in promotion of better farming methods and use of better seed. If a farmer finds he can increase the productivity of his soil and improve the quality of his cotton and corn, naturally he will desire to accomplish the same results on all the land he devotes to those crops. Through this means the revenue from his agricultural operations will be enlarged. The bank is rendering the whole community a service in stimulating interest in improved methods.—Texarkana Gazette.

Merrily We Roll Along!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
SEA Service Writer

PHILADELPHIA.—"There is no wet-dry issue in this campaign," Pennsylvania's politicians announced—and thought that settled it.

On the eve of the Republican primary May 20 it's not only the sole issue discussed by the voters. It's the worst bogey the politicians have had in many years.

Wealthy Pennsylvania wets, allied with the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, have waged a hot campaign for a sin-pur wet ticket and if they pull as many wet votes as the politicians fear, they are likely to have an important effect on the immediate future of American politics.

For the first time a straight-out wet Republican ticket of high class candidates, adequately financed and with a semblance of organization, has made enough noise and put on enough steam to be reckoned a major factor in an important campaign in a great state. Of course, a small vote on the 20th would discourage any more such experiments.

Outside the state you hear of Puddler Jim Davis and Francis Shunk Brown, candidates of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh machines for senator and governor. And of Governor Joe Grundy and former Governor Clifford Pinchot, their principal opponents for those nominations. All are dry, unless one takes note of Brown's promise to favor a referendum on the Snyder state enforcement act.

Once in Philadelphia you immediately learn about Phillips and Bohlen, the wet candidates. Congressman Thomas W. Phillips, millionaire business man, is on the ticket for governor and Francis H.

Bohlen, professor of law at University of Pennsylvania, for senator.

And you hear everyone asking: "Can Phillips take enough wet votes from Brown to let Pinchot win? What effect will Bohlen have?"

You hear, on what seems excellent authority, that if the wets win the Republican nomination for Pinchot in such manner they will organize an independent wet ticket with the idea of defeating that famous dry in the November election and electing their own governor.

That may sound fantastic—but not to Pennsylvania's in the midst of the fight. Not half fantastic enough to suit the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh bosses behind Davis and Brown.

First you're impressed by the Phillips-Bohlen posters and banners everywhere. And the pep displayed at the noon-day speech meetings in the headquarters on Chestnut street.

Then down through the heart of Philadelphia during the rush hour comes a huge modern bandwagon, whose four huge loudspeakers can be heard for many blocks over the roar of traffic. Somebody inside the "caravan" microphonizing an itinerant wet speech to all Philadelphia.

"Vote as you think!" "Vote as you drink!" So goes the refrain. Then someone else inside breaks into a rollicking wet campaign song and you can hear that for blocks, too. Crowds follow the bus.

You wonder whether all this means anything and hike on over to the main wet headquarters. Here's a hive of industry and enthusiasm, comparable in size and effort to any of the others.

Today, As For Years

BUICK

POLICY.

"Satisfy the customer." This has been the service policy of the Buick Motor Company throughout the twenty-seven years of its history. And so faithfully has Buick followed this policy that today the family emblem of Authorized Buick Service means prompt, efficient, courteous maintenance to more than 1,500,000 Buick owners. Buick has twice as many owners as any other company selling cars priced above $1200.

Here are a few of the many important points of Buick's Service Policy:

More than 4,000 factory-supervised Service Stations assure all Buick owners the same fine standard of skilled Buick service.

A written Warranty, covering the first 4,000 miles or the first 90 days of ownership, whichever shall accrue first, guarantees every new Buick car to be free from defects in material or workmanship.

Should parts or workmanship prove defective at any time during the Warranty period, Buick dealers will supply the parts and perform the necessary labor free of charge.

In addition to careful pre-delivery tests, the Buick owner receives two major inspections without cost—one after 500 miles and another after 1500 miles of driving. These include a thorough road test of all elements of performance.

The "Tourist" and "Change of Residence" clauses permit the Buick owner to change his residence as frequently as he desires or to tour any part of the U. S. or Canada and still receive the full Warranty benefits from the nearest authorized Buick dealer.

ALL Buick dealers fulfill these provisions of BUICK'S service policy. All dedicate themselves to the task of serving promptly, efficiently and courteously.

B. & P. W. Club In Good Meeting

Closing Business Institutions Each Thursday Afternoon Discussed

Miss Elizabeth Harrison, retiring president of the Hope B. & P. W. club, was hostess at the last meeting of the club year, substituting for Miss Anne Martindale. The flowers and place cards emphasized the spring motif and Miss Harrison presented a rainbow program, on which Mrs.
Snow Stuart, Misses Mary Ellington
Arnold, Mamie Twitchell, Forrest Ruggles and Maude Lipscomb appeared with messages of information and inspiration.

During the course of the discussions, the need for the closing of places of business on Tuesday afternoon of each week during July and August was stressed and active work in behalf of this movement was outlined. The formation of a Library association was also advocated, as was a membership and attendance drive for B. & P. W. club members. It was stated that only those women who put the most into the club derive the maximum benefit therefrom and it was urged that their example be emulated.

During a short business session presided over by Miss Harrison, the minutes of the last meeting were read and the roll was called by Miss Mary Arnold. Miss Beryl Henry, the first president of the club, was introduced and in a very effective manner installed the new officers: Miss Clarice Cannon, president; Miss Snow Stuart, first vice president; Miss Mary Ellington Arnold, second vice president; Miss Hazel Arnold, recording secretary, and Miss Thelma Jo Cobb, corresponding secretary. Miss Lulie Allen, the new treasurer, was unable to be present. Miss Harrison spoke most graciously in turning over the gong and gavel to Miss Cannon, who responded in a most pleasing manner in which she pledged her best efforts to the membership and bespoke their active cooperation.

Guests for the evening were Mrs.
Robert Walker of Monroe, La., and Miss Elizabeth White, who were with Mrs. Chas. Walker.

Miss Martindale will be hostess for the next meeting, which will be on Tuesday evening, June 3.

The club, upon adjournment, extended its farewells to a valued member, Miss Carolyn Clark, who will enter college in Chicago this fall and therefore has resigned her position as member of the faculty of the Hope
High school.

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

NATALIE CONVINCES, jealous of her husband, ALAN, and over her behavior, she seeks sympathy from her secretary, PHILLIPPA, who, because of her jealousy, and she leaves Alan. Wounded pride prevents either from seeking a reconciliation. Alan turns to Phillippa for consolation.

Fearing that Alan does not mean to pursue her, Phillippa tells Alan her parents object to her going with a married man. Alan confesses to more than a friendship for her, and they become engaged.

Unhappy and repentant, Natalie writes Alan that she is returning to her home, without, however, mentioning a reconciliation. A friendly letter, followed by a telegram from Natalie, asking him to meet her at the station, leaves Alan hopeful, but baffled as to Natalie's intentions. Phillippa, fearful of losing Alan, tells him she is obliged to leave home because of her father's objections to him, and Alan offers a raise in salary to offset the expense of sending her to meet him that evening, but that he will be somewhat late.

Alan's secretary, with Natalie, who brings her young sister, FLORENCE, with her, leaves them both unhappy. He meets Phillippa later and apologetically explains he met Natalie and took her home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIX

"LET'S not stay long at dinner," Phillippa suggested. "I do want you to see the apartment, Alan."

Alan started. "Apartment? Oh, yes." He had not entirely forgotten the apartment. It had shadowed his meeting with Natalie too thoroughly to be put out of his mind altogether.

"Can't we wait until another time?" he asked. "I'm pretty tired."

Phillippa was willing. She had got what she wanted by bringing him back to her. She had mentioned the apartment only to change the subject from Natalie, and to remind him she was taking an apartment. She didn't want him to forget, either, that he had an interest in it.

"Tomorrow?" she proposed, and Alan had no choice but to consent.

They dined more or less in silence. Phillippa sparkled when she could, and cleverly made Alan believe that it was a great effort for her to be gay.

His thoughts, most of the time, were up in Hillshire; when they did come back to his companion, it was to feel guilty over her. He might easily have told her, he told himself, that she was in any way to blame for the present state of affairs. But she was just a sweet kid, who probably knew, and was terrified to death over it, that her fate hung in the balance.

He could chuck her. The thought made him ashamed.

Phillippa knew that he had suffered a twinge of conscience, that he was convulsively hanging on to his honor.

"And I'll keep him hanging on until it hurts," she said to herself. At the same time she smiled up at him from eyes brimful of unshed tears. Iron chains wouldn't hold him as effectively as the clinging weakness with which she had entrapped him.

She glowed, inwardly, with the knowledge of her power over him.

BUT what the devil was he to do? He asked himself this question far into the night, while Phillippa reposed for the last time under her father's roof, calmly sleeping the sleep of the unjust.

From her point of view, his course should have been clear to him. But she didn't know, so she slept, while Alan and Natalie, each longing for the other, tossed and turned and suffered.

The next day Alan went with her to look at the apartment. He felt he had been untrue to her by thinking so much of Natalie. He wanted to make it up. The rather high rental of the apartment did not give him a moment's pause. He was glad Phillippa was to have such a really charming abode.

And he agreed, without being aware of how Phillippa had managed to put it up to him, to pay for the furnishings. She was elated. There was work enough to keep Alan in the office all afternoon, while she shopped, unless he were to be downright neglectful of it, and go off to Natalie.

If she could stick to him through luncheon, she exclaimed, looking at her watch; "shall we lunch, Alan?"

They were on their way to the street from the apartment of the superintendent of the building.

"I was thinking of snatching a bite somewhere, and hurrying back to the office," Alan declared.

"Oh, don't do that," she objected hastily. "You'll have indigestion all afternoon, and besides, I want to discuss my shopping list with you."

"And then you'll get what you want anyway," Alan declared teasingly.

"No, I won't, really, Alan. I need your suggestions. You see," she smiled a timid appeal for consideration of what she was going to say, "I want to get things that we can use later—when we have our own home."

Alan became vastly uncomfortable. "I'm afraid that's a poor plan," he said quickly. "Better get what you ought to have in the apartment."

"Well, anyway, let's go to lunch and talk it over," Phillippa insisted, quite unabashed.

"No, I really don't think I'd better," Alan returned firmly, and Phillippa realized that her reference to their future home had been unfortunate. Apparently it had put him on edge.

"Very well," she said, and could not entirely strain the acid out of her voice.

He had lost his interest in snatching a bite. When he parted with Phillippa, a few moments later, he hurried back to the office, and inquired if there had been any telephone calls for him.

There were several; among them one from his home. He had a call put in at once. Natalie answered.

He felt his heart pound when he heard her voice.

"Can you come up tonight?" she asked pleasantly. "I want to talk with you, Alan."

"Is that a dinner invitation?" he hinted eagerly.

"Why, yes, if you like," Natalie agreed, laughing a little at him.

"I'll be there at six," he promised. "How are you?"

"I'm... almost... happy," Natalie admitted, though she had not intended to say anything of the kind when she answered his call. Then she hung up.

ALAN whirled his desk chair around, like a gleeful little boy, himself in it, his feet stuck straight out before him. He felt like singing ballad.

But there was some work he had to do. He did it with dispatch, keeping an eye on the clock. He figured that Phillippa would shop until nearly time for the office to close. He wanted to get away before she came back.

And he did. When she arrived he was on his way to his hotel, happily anticipating the evening ahead of him. He congratulated himself upon having no previous engagement. He smiled over this, thinking it might be one on Phillippa, for the thought had come to him that, innocent and dear as she was, she had a most devastating way of keeping him dated up ahead.

NATALIE was just as happily excited as he.

"Well, how did it go?" Florence asked, when her sister turned away from the telephone.

"Splendidly!" Natalie exclaimed.

"There, didn't I tell you so?" Florence gloated. "The idea of your tearing your heart out all night—yes you did, you look it—when a word will settle everything."

Natalie became solemn. "But I'm not so sure of that," she said. "Poor! What you need is me, dearest, to advise you. Good thing I caught you crying this morning, or you wouldn't have told me a word about it."

Natalie looked inquiring.

"I mean how you felt about Alan's going away last night when you wanted him to stay," Florence obligingly amplified.

"But what could you expect, when you didn't encourage him to stay?"

"But I told you, I thought he had an engagement," Natalie answered.

"Yes, I know. But a woman in love shouldn't think. She'll always make a mess of it. However, the real trouble, Natalie, was a touch of your old malady. You've confessed what it was, now confess that you were a little jealous again last night."

Natalie's expression convicted her. "Well," she began defensively, "wasn't my coming back enough? Nothing but a woman could have kept Alan away from me without an explanation."

"Well, what if he did have a date?" Florence sensibly demanded. "He might have broken it if you'd asked him to stay. But, look here, we've gone over all this before. It's a good thing that I was calm enough to see that the poor man was dying to stay, even if he did act a little queer. And now you see I was right. He jumped at the chance to come up, didn't he?"

Natalie smiled uncertainly. "Perhaps you're right," she said. "Right? Hah! Leave it to the younger generation. And now, let's see. What are you going to have for dinner?"

"Chicken, with waffles," Natalie answered unhesitatingly.

"Alan left his car. I'll go out and do the shopping, while you help Ethel. Oh, how I wish I had Hannah and Frances back again."

"Serves you right, but wait a minute; don't buy any chicken for me. I'm going out with Andrew."

"Florence, you darling!" Natalie cried.

"Yes?" Florence stood with her hands on her hips and her head on one side, a teasing smile on her lips. "Maybe Andrew would agree with you if I had a red velvet evening wrap."

It was Natalie's wrap she referred to. "Take it, you little robber," Natalie laughed.

Florence kissed her ecstatically. "I'll dust around," she promised. "And then I'll blow. I've got to get a wave. What time is Alan coming?"

"He said he'd be here by six," Natalie told her.

"Unfashionably early, but I'll be out. Good luck, sis."

Natalie hugged her tight and let her go. "Don't stay out too late," she begged.

"Certainly not," Florence declared. "Andrew's new job is our marriage license. It shall receive all due consideration."

Natalie looked at her watch. "I must hurry," she said. Which was precisely what Alan was saying to himself a few hours later at his hotel, as he reached for his hat and coat. He had only ten minutes to catch his train.

And then the telephone rang. His heart sank as he recognized Phillippa's voice.

The honest reason

THERE IS ONLY one real reason for smoking and that's pleasure. A pretty good reason after all. The cigarette you select in the long run will be the one that can contribute most to your enjoyment.

Camels are made with that idea in mind—the idea that genuine smoke pleasure is what you want in a cigarette.

When you try them you will find a refreshing difference—a mild, mellow richness of choice tobaccos—a blended harmony of fragrance, silky smooth—that makes smoking a delight.

The fact that more millions have chosen Camel than any other cigarette is a tribute to an honest product, marketed for an honest purpose.
